Re: Arthur T. House

To Whom It May Concern:

During my many years in the business world, including those when I was either the Chief Financial Officer of a Fortune 500 company or when I was President of a successful bank in Chicago, I have been asked to write letters of recommendation for many people. Sometimes I was rather hesitant but I assure you that, in the case of Mr. House, I am quite pleased and confident.

I have known Art House for several years, even before he relocated to Florida on a permanent basis. I had the pleasure of working beside Art at the Small Business Development Center where I was involved as a volunteer. I was so impressed with his attitude of "getting the job done" that I later had the opportunity to work with him again in several construction related consulting assignments and was able to see that same character trait applied to other projects. Art has the unique ability not only to understand the technical aspects of a job but also the financial controls required to meet a budget. He is also one of the most energetic individuals I have ever met and he, therefore, creates an energetic environment all around him. This field of energy is contagious and it manifests itself in a very visible increase in productivity of both his co-workers and subordinates.

If the position that you are seeking to fill requires honesty, energy, integrity, reliability, dependability, intelligence, construction experience, financial acumen, and just plain common sense, then I think that you should look no further than Arthur T. House.

Sincerely,

Harry S. Brown,
President
